You can edit images with free online software. The most notable example is PicMonkey (www.picmonkey.com). The obvious tools for image altering are the tools available in the drawing programs. These tools include curves, lasso, paint bucket, and shape tools. Table 4-1 shows the location of these tools on Mac OS X. Figure 4-7 shows the tools available in Adobe Photoshop Elements 9. Illustrations by Wiley, Composition by Shutterstock.com Figure 4-7: Some online tools provide ways to edit an image to make it suitable for various purposes. You can create many types of images with layers. However, changing the type of file you are editing to a newer one (such as TIFF, JPG, or PNG) can cause loss of data in layers. If you are saving your image files as PNGs, as most Photoshop users do, you can edit all of your layers. (As you start an image editing project, you can find a good tutorial on the Internet that explains the need for PNG files.) If you have any questions as you create an image, look for tutorials online. You can access many of the features with a click of a button. That's why a lot of you use Photoshop to create a large set of templates and then use an online service such as www.PicMonkey.com to design your product or website. With PicMonkey (not all services require a subscription), you can create a wide range of templates to quickly insert graphics, use text, and place images into, as well as alter the look of them. There are, however, other online services that offer image creation and editing services. Some services even create in Flash, so your images can be viewed in a web browser. Photoshop has features that you use when creating a design. You don't want to be too fussy about colors or text. You usually use the Spot Healing Brush (which is a bit like the Magic Wand tool, covered in Chapter 2) to clean up small areas of an image that are damaged or misaligned. In its most basic form, the Spot Healing Brush tool is a drag line that sprays out dots of color to cover where you need to paint in an image. You can create a custom brush for each task you need to accomplish. You can also use this tool to make fine adjustments to an image. Figure 4-8 shows the Spot Healing Brush tool in

Q: Orienting tables in scrbook Is there a way to edit the page number(s) that appear in the table of contents of a scrbook document? It is supposed to be in the middle of each chapter, but instead it seems to be the last page of the preceding chapter. For example, the first line of the index would be: 0.1: P,Q,R rather than P,Q,R 0.1: This happens regardless of the contents of the header and footer, which are as follows:

\documentclass[12pt,oneside,final]{scrbook} \usepackage{sclayer-scrpage}
\usepackage[table,svgnames]{xcolor} \usepackage{amsmath} \usepackage{booktabs} \usepackage{fancyhdr}
\usepackage{fancyvrb} \usepackage{mathrsfs} \usepackage{placeins} \usepackage{setspace} \usepackage{rotating}

Feeding practices and growth of children in the City of Cape Town: I. Demographics. A study on the demographics of children under the age of five in the City of Cape Town was carried out in 1984. It attempted to describe the demographic profile of the infant and young child under the age of five years, including mothers' knowledge of and their practices concerning nutrition, and their growth patterns. The study was based on a sample survey of households and included 302 randomly selected mothers under the age of 35 years. The interviews covered demographic and maternal factors, the child's birth characteristics and growth history, infant feeding practices, and the nutritional intake of the child. The median number of live children in the household was two, and the median age of the eldest child was 20 months. The median age of the mothers was 27 months. About 42.9% of the children were breast-fed exclusively, 22.9% were not breast-fed at all, and the rest received the other commonly used infant foods. The median duration of breastfeeding was nine months. The median age of the children that were breast-fed exclusively was 18 months; the median age of those that were fed with other foods was five months. The median weight of the children was 6.0 kg, and the median height was 75.7 cm. About 23% of the children were below the 50th percentile for weight, and 18.9% were below the 50th percentile for height. The growth status of the children in relation to their mother's birth weight, length and parity were similar, regardless of the infant feeding pattern. Pre-maturity was the only significant correlate of low birth weight. The observed low weight-for-height status of almost 25% of the children is a major public health problem, and requires intervention by the health services. The majority of the children were breast-fed for nine months, with the lowest frequency of breastfeeding occurring in the period from one to six months of age. These observations clearly show a need for services to be developed to facilitate the expression of breast-feeding at the desired time periods, and also to provide breast-feeding with the appropriate frequency and duration.
