In this paper, we report a new method of applying carbon nanotube (CNT) coated paper as a separation medium in the capillary liquid chromatography (cLC). CNT has excellent conductivity properties and CNT coated paper is highly fluorescent, thus it is possible to perform simultaneous analysis of a pair of charged solutes and a pair of analytes in one single run, either by fluorescence or chemiluminescence detection. Moreover, CNT coated paper can be used as a chromatographic support for cLC with high mechanical strength and hydrophobicity. Detection was performed
