On the Macintosh version of Photoshop, you must use the exact same software version as on your computer, even if it is a different operating system. If you are trying to use Photoshop without a program like Adobe Bridge, ensure that you have the software preloaded on your computer to use with the program. Don't attempt to run Photoshop without the software; otherwise, you'll get errors. Figure 12-1 shows a sample of a photo I'd created in Photoshop with an overlay. You'll see an example of how you can use Photoshop to create a background for your photo, add shadows and other elements on the photo, and layer multiple images or shapes over the original photo. Photoshop provides a lot of control over the look of the layers. If you make changes to a layer, you must select whether you want to update the original document or use the new layer as a basis for the new document. Each layer can contain different content. If you are working on a larger image and you change the appearance of one or more layers, you can "save" the effects and return to the original document without changing the overall appearance of the photo. This ability to go back and forth between a single layer and the original document is one of the main reasons that Photoshop is such a powerful image editing program. Figure 12-1: Photoshop is a powerful tool for editing your photo. Here's how to use

Photoshop to create a layered image: 1. Start a new document in Photoshop and name it Landscape. 2. Create a background layer in the Layers palette and place it on top of the Landscape image. Don't create the background in an area of the image that has content such as a crop that you want to keep. It's a good practice to add a background image for the entire area of the image — at least 100 pixels to 200 pixels on each side. 3. Create a new layer on top of the background layer. 4. Select the foreground and background colors in the color palette, and then begin painting. 5. Load the Color Picker (Ctrl+L), shown in Figure 12-2, and pick colors for the land, sky, and buildings. Photoshop works like a color wheel, so you can create a blue sky by using a light blue for the sky color and a dark blue for the wall color. 6. Create an adjustment layer using the following steps: •

In a press release this morning, D.C. Attorney General Karl Racine alleged that the University Preparatory Charter School, a charter school in the District that has a campus in Silver Spring and is a member of the corporate sponsor organization of African American Leadership High School, is not eligible for the tax credits. Racine alleges that African American Leadership High School's principal will be charged with illegal conduct under the "piggy-backing" statute, which prohibits the practice of receiving educational funding to which one is not entitled. "The fraudulent activity at the University Preparatory Charter School clearly impacted the budgets of a great number of public and private entities and their ability to invest in and strengthen Maryland's public schools," Racine said. "To counter this fraudulent practice, Attorney General Racine and his team of attorneys are holding accountable those individuals involved. We will work with our partners at the Department of Homeland Security to ensure all Maryland public school systems, including the District's public school system, are receiving the correct educational funding that is appropriate for their unique needs and circumstances." University Preparatory Charter School is also a member of the corporate sponsor organization of African American Leadership High School, and the latter has participated in multi-million dollar projects with the former. The charges are the result of an investigation that began in the fall of 2016, and is being conducted by Racine and Assistant Attorney General David Hanebrink.Q: how to get text from a button in a listview and pass it on to other activities? i created the listview and its working perfectly the user can choose from many items in the listview, if the user chooses one of the items it will come up with the next activity with the item the user chose and then it should populate with the users details, i am not sure how to get the text from one item clicked and then pass it on to the next activity, please help thanks public View getView(int position, View
