Vickers Supermarine Spitfire Vs The epic showdown between the Spitfire Vs and the mighty P-51 Mustang was held in England, the RAF's headquarters being located at the time in Hendon. The Avro Lancaster Mk XIV was the RAF's main bombing and photographic aircraft during World War 2 and much of the work was carried out by the IX Squadron. I was a long way from home as we flew over and I watched it from the ground. We watched an Avro Lancaster circling above and we all knew the man underneath the aircraft was a Spitfire pilot, of that much we were certain. About 35,000 people lined the streets as we took off on our way to the show. I am told there were no guards protecting the Spitfire, because the people were so thrilled to see this symbol of Great Britain leading the charge. The first pilot to fly the Spitfire, from the day it first appeared at Cranwell, was Flight Sergeant John Derry. As soon as the Spitfire Vs took off we watched and waited in eager anticipation. The air show began and the Spitfire Vs rose majestically into the sky. Our excitement was building and every time they went around they dipped their wings and gave us a nod, giving the crowd a message. One Spitfire made an unannounced zoom climb to the exact spot where I was watching and I had goose bumps as it just flew straight over me. The Spitfire Vs flew on over the crowd as we just sat and stared at it. It was wonderful to see. We smiled and cheered and people were absolutely thrilled to see something so magnificent. There were several Spitfire Vs that made a dramatic maneuver and the crowd went crazy. One of the most spectacular manoeuvres was when a Spitfire Vs took off with all four engines on fire, after a hydraulics problem. The Spitfire, which had taken fire, flew straight into the ground at full throttle, one of the wheels coming off. But that's war! We continued to watch as Spitfire Vs made a

The company CoilTap Inc. (designs and manufactures custom electronic insulation products including: high voltage bushings, cable guide loops, radial cable guides, electrical insulation products, high voltage switchgear tools and high voltage connectors. My project is to test the insulation resistance of their thermoconductive rubber (TC) insulated copper wire under various high voltage conditions, including discharge and over voltage. The insulated copper wire was suspended under high-voltage conditions with a voltage probe connected to the two copper wires. Before the insulation testing, the copper wires were connected to the high-voltage equipment which applied the voltage. The insulated copper wires were disconnected and then connected to the high-voltage equipment to apply the high voltage. A low voltage probe connected to the electric eye was placed on the insulation voltage to check the insulation performance. Keywords/Phrases Keywords in Remove in Remove in Remove + Add another field
