Two types of consumer attitude research (opinion data and product usage data) are compared in this paper. A nationwide online survey was conducted for a research project in Taiwan, involving 1,452 respondents. The respondents were recruited via e-mail messages from a database that contained all current and potential customers. Data mining was employed in analysing and summarizing the collected data. Firstly, an exploratory factor analysis was carried out on the opinion data to investigate the factors of consumer attitudes towards shopping. Then, the factors were utilized to construct a synthetic attitude scale. The results indicated that four main factors (e.g., Productivity, Materialism, Body, and Care) were extracted. On the basis of the results, a parallel factor analysis (PARAFAC) was conducted on the product usage data to further explore the factors underlying product use patterns. The results showed that three factors were extracted. Finally, a PARAFAC analysis was also conducted on the product usage data to evaluate whether the extracted three factors could explain the usage of other products. The results suggested that the three factors were generalised across all products, indicating that they could be employed to compare their relative importance. Some comparisons with existing research are also given.

It has now been found that some 1-(aralkyl substituted)-1-cyclopropyl-1H-1,2,4-triazole-5-acetic acids and derivatives thereof are very effective in inhibiting the growth of S. aureus strains having resistance to methicillin (MRSA), e.g., resistant to oxacillin or cloxacillin.Q: How to create a Sequence Chart in Python pandas? I would like to create a sequence chart using pandas. I know how to plot a line chart, but I have no idea how to create a sequence chart. Code to plot a line chart: import seaborn as sns sns.set() ax = sns.lineplot(x="Time1", y="Open", data = df) ax.set_ylabel("Opens") ax.set_xlabel("Date") fig, ax = plt.subplots() plt.show() A: If you want to keep the rows in your DataFrame, I would recommend using pandas.plot instead of seaborn.
