I have been reading what dimensions of a speaker should be considered correct. I've seen many lines at 4 inches. I personally feel anything less than 4 inches is just a waste of money. But, I also know that any taller than 4 inches is awkward. It's almost like a strange countertop/back desk thing (they are referred to as towers in the audio world). I came upon this question when I was looking to replace a subwoofer that was just too big. I decided to instead just add a pair of midbass speakers, or in my case, an LM1894. Here are the dimensions of the LM1894: The LM1894 is a 4 inch radius speaker. So I was thinking about buying a 4 inch driver, 2 inches of cone material (I believe the LM1894 is a dome speaker), and then put in some sort of soft enclosure to make it not sound so large and have a lower profile (to make it not stand out as much). I have seen other subwoofers and they all sound great at 4 inches, but I know that this method would just be a waste of money and I would not be able to use it in my car. But, it seems like this is a standard way to go with speakers. A: 4" is about the smallest cone I'd

I'm not member of koogle, can you register me there? I don't want to loose my 2 year impressions.

Waiting for your reply

That's a higher competitive range than I can offer. However, I can teach you some ways to manage the hits that you receive with more balanced ranges. So yes, you should still be able to reach koogle from here and there.

Now when will I get my account to koogle? Ever since eveyu block beta invites I have been a no show.

I want to see my friends welcome me to koogle.
