in all she has inspired' MORE is set to visit Japan next week, where she plans to meet with Japanese first lady Akie Abe. The first lady, who is visiting the country on a private trip, will speak at a women's event on Monday, according to a source familiar with her plans. She will also meet with U.S. Ambassador to Japan William Hagerty on Tuesday. Abe will host a so-called "listening party" for the first lady, an opportunity for her to speak with Japanese business executives and housewives on issues including fashion and women's empowerment, according to the source. Trump will travel to Osaka on Saturday, where she will meet with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and deliver remarks at the G-20 summit. She is not expected to deliver a formal address at the summit, one that would be made to the leaders of other world countries, as she did during the G-7 in Canada last year. While the trip may be a private one for the first lady, the two will travel together. The first lady traditionally travels with her husband during international trips.
