Future In September 2018, Autodesk released AutoCAD 360 2.1 for the first time as a web-based application. This was the first major update since Autodesk discontinued it as a desktop software package in September 2016. Versions for Linux, macOS and Windows are available through AutoCAD 360 for AutoCAD LT 2016, AutoCAD LT 2017 and AutoCAD LT 2018 As with previous versions, AutoCAD 360 2.1 allows users to switch between Autodesk style and third-party style templates. AutoCAD 360 2.1 includes the ObjectARX 2.1 API, which allows developers to interact with the drawing canvas in a similar way to the older ObjectARX 1.0 API. In July 2019, Autodesk released AutoCAD 360 Pro for web and iOS. All new features available in AutoCAD 2018 are also available in AutoCAD 360 for iOS and AutoCAD 360 for web. AutoCAD 360 Pro On November 5, 2018, Autodesk announced AutoCAD 360 Pro, the first completely new version of AutoCAD since 2016. Introduced as a web-based version of AutoCAD, users will be able to access and draw 3D and 2D drawings from a web browser. This version allows users to switch between Autodesk-style templates or third-party-style templates. The ability to switch templates on the fly allows users to apply and export AutoCAD drawing settings and files to a different style without the need to first export the file to a different style and then apply those settings back to the drawing. The new version also includes improved collaborative capabilities with new file sharing features. AutoCAD 360 Pro has been built as a web-based application, accessible by all browsers. AutoCAD 360 Pro is available for web, iOS, macOS and Windows. AutoCAD 360 Studio On May 18, 2019, Autodesk released AutoCAD 360 Studio. AutoCAD 360 Studio is a web application for AutoCAD that will allow users to access their drawings from a browser. This app will also allow users to easily share files and drawings. AutoCAD 360 Studio is accessible by all browsers, but is a web application, not a web-based application. Also like AutoCAD 360 Pro, AutoCAD 360 Studio has been built as a web application, accessible by all ca3bfb1094
