03:38:05 24 oz. styrofoam and a silica sand feels very light, maybe its because of the foam or the sand or both. a house built from rubble doesn't seem to settle, but it works. i have cement on my back porch, but its heavy and a little clunky. by john march 02, 2008 11:59 am artisdy Posted - 04/03/2008 : 07:41:33 i made a platform that weighs approx. 50 pounds. i built it with styrofoam and jute weeds to protect the landform. i hope someone finds it useful. Art by julia march 03, 2008 01:48 pm majesties Posted - 04/07/2008 : 12:55:18 Great! I used it in my tunnel platform and loved it. Began looking for the link to find this. But I don't think that it would have worked as well as what you built it from. Glad to see others have taken up the challenge! Re: Construction Posted - 04/07/2008 : 01:13:48 the whole thing isnt wrapped around cement. just put rock between two layers of styrofoam and more styrofoam on top. so you have two layers of styrofo

Homeless parents forced to ask for help to house their children have been told that it is illegal in England and Wales to send them to relatives, The Independent on Sunday can reveal. The families, who have tried to prevent their children being placed in foster homes by contacting Social Services departments and media outlets, were told they could be in breach of the law if they sent their children to relatives - even if it was their own mother. Some of the parents have received letters from the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) instructing them to comply with Social Services rules, which state that children may not be taken from their families - no matter who is carer - if the child is known to have been neglected and the carer is not a relative. Download the new Independent Premium app Sharing the full story, not just the headlines There are a number of exceptions to the law in such cases - for example, if a child has been abused or is at risk of serious harm - but the DWP says it cannot offer any advice, other than to comply with the rules. It is thought that, in the vast majority of cases, relatives are reluctant to take children with the most difficult issues because of the stresses of being a foster parent. Social Services rules state that relatives must be contacted before foster carers are appointed, but the DWP has been sending letters advising parents not to contact relatives, even when the parents are able to meet the criteria set out in the child protection policies. The DWP has defended the decision, claiming that it is required by law to advise parents how to break the rules. Ken Hawkins, the deputy chief executive of
