Throughout the five-day event, hundreds of drafters will put the finishing touches on the joint projects they have been working on since January 31. Teams of two will enter their respective studios, work on their project, and then present it to the public. Though the winners will be announced next week, the first place team will be announced on Saturday. The judging criteria will include: technical skill, creativity, and quality of execution of the project. Over the past few weeks, Henry Lim has been working on his Elite: Dangerous project at the Fairmont Delta, and Shane McCalla has been working on his video game project at Cpl. Audra Couture Centre (CAC). For both teams, the present is a challenge. Because of limited space in the studios, each of their projects are small, covering approximately 30 square metres each. "The challenge lies in making everything fit into that space, which might not be possible," said McCalla, an 18-year-old electrical engineering student. As the leader of the team, Lim had the task of making sure his partner would be able to complete his work in the allotted time. "Our working environment is very small and space is limited so we have to be very careful when planning what we are going to do and when we are going to do it," said Lim. "The other challenge is that you need to be very protective of your work as it can get messy and dirty, you can't just throw it all out." Before the fair started, each team had a briefing by the NTUC and their project mentors. "We talked about the importance of teamwork and being good partners to achieve the task and each other," said Lim. "We started off with a bit of a rough draft. So we knew from the beginning what we wanted to do, but once we started, we discovered things that we had to add." McCalla said he had never tackled a project like this before. "I did not know what to expect and I had to discover it as I went along," he said. Both teams tackled their project head on and incorporated new challenges as they went along. The final pitch will be on July 6 and

Payday 2 Cheater Tag Remove

15 Jan 2013 Cheaters have entered the game and are being tagged for removal. Here's how to do it: New Patch, New Optimization, New Fixes, New Game Skins. This is just a guide on how to remove the cheater tag. Q: Django Rest Framework: serializer type for a value with type datetime, for different browsers I'm building an API for my Web App. I'm using django rest framework for it. Everything works nice except I have a problem when I want to put in the same request a value with type datetime (which are read with request.data) and a value of type string (which are read with request.data). When I make POST request to a endpoint with a value of type string, I get a datetime value, and this is the problem I'm having, I get this error when I try to send back a value to client: { "date_uploaded": 2017, "user_id": 1, "first_name": "Emanuelle", "body": "text", "phone_number": "5404241212", "head_picture": "" } But when I send it as a value with type datetime, django REST framework doesn't allow me to, because the request is invalid: { "date_uploaded": 2017-02-06T05:03:04.831Z, "user_id": 1, "first_name": "Emanuelle", "body": "text", "phone_number": "5404241212", "head_picture": "" } Is there a way I can send back the exact same datetime in a different format (JSON or date-only) because it works nice when I put a string and it get's validated. I would rather do it this way, as I'm currently doing something with cronjobs, to have the data in the same format. A: You can convert date_uploaded to 6d1f23a050
