Mac Geboren von: Erholt von: Samajwadi Party leader Akhilesh Yadav has written to the United Nations strongly urging the world body to strictly adhere to the stipulations of the 2013 Paris Climate Change Agreement. The letter, which has been seen by The Indian Express, is believed to be written in support of his grandfather and chief minister Mulayam Singh Yadav's appeal to the President of the UN General Assembly to stop the attacks by the US against Pakistan. The letter states that under the Paris Climate Change agreement, developed countries including the US will be liable to the provision of carbon credits to the countries whose projects meet international standards for mitigating the effects of climate change. "The pact says that the developed countries must ensure that they provide carbon credits to developing countries, in order to mitigate the effects of climate change. Of the 194 countries of the world, only 48 are in this category (developing nations). Out of these 48, 21 countries are from the world's poorest countries," the SP leader says in the letter. "All these countries do not have an economy to support the required spending on providing carbon credits to the developed countries. But 21 poorest countries are being subject to severe criticism by developed countries in the name of climate change. It is a deplorable situation which must be addressed by the UN," he says. The SP leader goes on to say that India should be given special consideration and carbon credits should be allotted to India to support it. "It is a matter of great concern. On one hand, the US President Donald Trump has cut back on his promise to provide the US with carbon credits. On the other hand, India, which has increased its greenhouse gas emission by 18 per cent, is being criticised for not complying with the Paris Climate Change Agreement," he says. I've written this code: #!/bin/ksh read var echo $var #This works fine echo $1 #This doesn't work In a unix shell as the shebang, this returns the value of var as a string (a space after the $). Question is: how can I return the value of $var as a variable? It's really important for me. A: There is no real advantage of using ksh over bash here. It may look different to bash: $ var=xyz; echo $var xyz $ echo $1 xyz $ bash --version GNU bash, version 4.2.30(1)-release (x86_64-redhat-linux-gnu) $ ksh --version Version 0.99.7 Please do not suggest Bash as a POSIX shell, because it is not. Either use ksh or Bash. Bash is a GNU extension. They are different, see here for more information. Q: Deploying a VSTS 2011 build definition to an already existing TFS 2010 server My company is currently in the process of moving our build server from TFS 2010 to TFS 2012. We have about 250 custom build definitions in VSTS that we're trying to deploy to the new server. We have one project that has .NET 4.0 and MSBuild 3.5 installed on the new server. I'm able to manually configure the build definition to use the new server 6d1f23a050
