"my wife used to beat me a lot," she says. "she was really jealous of me because i was doing so well in my life, and she felt like she wasn't." what a bitch. alice is a good, clean girl with nothing to hide, yet her wife was so jealous that she had to beat her up. she must have been awesome in the sack. how did alice get so fucked up? she says she was in grad school when she met aaron, a guy she'd known for years and who was a tax attorney who specialized in tax law. aaron was a rising star at the irs until the feds indicted him and put him on trial for tax fraud. because he didn't want to spend all that money on lawyers, he agreed to a compromise with the feds. if he proved to them that he was innocent of tax crimes, they'd drop all the charges against him. but if he was convicted, he'd be doing a long federal prison sentence. we asked what happened in court. alice says she can't go into too much detail. she says the jury didn't believe she had been cheating on her husband with aaron and she was convicted. on the one hand, it's hard to believe she would be honest about this. she sounds like a liar. on the other hand, it's easy to believe the jury couldn't just forgive her. after all, she was a model, a college graduate, and she was aaron's wife. she wasn't a stripper or a porn star. she was a legal secretary who could have gone to law school and become a judge or an attorney general. we asked if she'd cheated on her husband with aaron. no comment. we asked how she could be a tax lawyer and be doing so well in life, when she was convicted of tax fraud. "just thank god," she said. "i can't even describe how bad it was. i lost my son two years ago, and that was the toughest time of my life." here, she starts crying. 5ec8ef588b
