How to deploy custom projects to heroku while retaining git revision history? I'm developing a project on my Windows PC using the Visual Studio version control using git for tracking changes. I'd now like to deploy this project to a production server which runs on linux. Are there any good tools I can use to deploy my files to the linux server and keep my revision history? I've seen a few articles about Heroku but I'm not exactly sure if the git version tracking with Heroku would work. Thanks for any help. A: The "Right tool for the job" for deploying to Heroku is Heroku's git add-on. See for some introductory information. A: Heroku does a great job with Git. Yes, you have to add a 'bin' directory to your git repo and put a 'bin' directory in your web app on Heroku, but you can configure a Procfile to install a development dependency (the 'bin' directory). You can also add a Procfile to your main app to be really smart about the git-add that you add into the bin directory. Now, what if the bin directory contains a jar or something of a language that Heroku does not support
