KEYMACRO is a free utility that allows you to record keyboard macros (keystrokes or combinations of keys) using two functions: Auto Recorder and Keyboard Recorder. Auto Recorder lets you record... Ptblsl - Save & Restore Full Access One of the greatest issues when Windows 10 was launched in July 2015 was the fact that it included many user-tracking functions. People who want to bypass them can turn to dedicated third-party applications, such as Windows 10 Privacy Fixer. No installation required Unlike some similar solutions, this tool is addressed not only to tech-savvy users but also to novices, since it does not require any expert skills to enjoy it. You do not need to install it on your computer, as it can run out-of-the-box, without this affecting its functionality. Moreover, you can just carry it on a removable flash drive and launch it whenever you want to disable the tracking functions in any Windows 10 PC you work on. Disable tracking functions in Windows 10 The application comes with a neat GUI (graphic user interface) that simply requires you to check the current state of your PC. Once the analysis is complete, you can proceed to fix the detected issues, such as disabling Feedback frequency or Microsoft Telemetry Hosts. You also get to remove the Windows.old folder that was left behind when you upgraded to Windows 10 (note that this means you will not be able to downgrade to the previous edition in the future, should you need to). Moreover, you can disable the Smart Screen Filter if you do not want it to warn you about every program you install on your PC. Enhance privacy settings with several mouse clicks One of the few downsides of this app is that many of its interface buttons are not (yet) working, which might seem misleading to some users. Overall, Windows 10 Privacy Fixer can prove to be a handy solution for all those who are not happy with the tracking features embedded in Windows 10 and was to block them. KEYMACRO Description: KEYMACRO is a free utility that allows you to record keyboard macros (keystrokes or combinations of keys) using two functions: Auto Recorder and Keyboard Recorder. in- and out-of-sample predictions in linear regression model Suppose I fit the linear regression model
$$Y = \mathbf{X}\theta + \epsilon$$
 The in-sample performance will then be given by $\widehat{\theta}$, the out-of-sample performance by $\hat{\theta}'$. If X is a $N \times p$ matrix with $N > p$, what is the difference between the two? A: Let β be a vector of length p and assume that $N=1$, X is a vector of length p and $n=1$. The regression model is
$$Y = \beta_0 + \beta_1 X + \epsilon$$
 It is easy to see that $\hat{\beta}_0$ is the same for any observation of X and $\hat{\beta}_1$ is the same for any observation of X (any vector with the same value in the position of X and zeros elsewhere). What is the regression coefficient β_0 in the sample? It is the same as the regression coefficient β in the population. What is the regression coefficient β_1 in the sample? It is the same as the regression coefficient β in the population. In other words, $\hat{\beta}_0$ is the estimator of β_0 in the sample and $\hat{\beta}_1$ is the estimator of β_1 in the sample. Now, suppose that $n > 1$ and suppose that the model is
$$Y = \beta_0 + \beta_1 X + \epsilon$$
 So, $\hat{\beta}_0$ is the same for any X_i and $\hat{\beta}_1$ is the same for any X_i . What is the regression coefficient β_0
