We like to use it for one thing we call 'Glam' by bringing life into your photos. Just add some texture, add a person or pet, apply some noise to the image, and add a few filters. But it's very important to note that this will make your image softer and with more of a blurred look. If you want a sharper photo and more clear photo then you'll want to use another tool. Or you can try out another 'Glam' using the post filter tools that we talked about earlier. It's just up to you to decide if you are looking for a more realistic or 'look at me' style photo.

Fingerprinting is also a little bit of a problem, but with a quality product you can minimize the chances of having your prints damaged. I can talk about more about this later but while you are looking into this, do not go blindly. For quality prints, you should always look for a high quality firm to cover your prints. Your heart is really in the right place, but you cannot really control what they do with your artwork. Always check the quality of your print, and your printer's customer service. It is always worth double checking to be sure. Often times, a few generations into a print, or through the years, there's nicks or scratches in the final product. e3d0a04c9c
